W3 Individual reflection - Jenny

What do I want to learn or understand better?
After this week we have created a pretty good foundation of our work ahead. Therefore we are now aiming to start working with our user stories and code. The technology we will be using (except for IntelliJ, Java) is Android Studio, which I have never used before. My next learning objective is therefore to learn how to use this tool so I can contribute to the development of our application. To do this I will ask my fellow team members that have used it before, but also do some research online.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?
I believe that co-programming and/or learning can be good to try and figure out how to use unfamiliar tools. So by having good communication between members and working together on our work tasksI hope to achieve this. I also hope I can help the members of our group that are unfamiliar with certain concepts or tools that I have used before. Right now I try to do this as much as possible, as well as explaining things whenever anything seems a bit unclear. I will continue to do so ahead and make sure I'm available for questions.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?
We haven't started using scrum that much yet, more than preparing for the weeks ahead. What I have done though is that I have written a lot of user stories for the different functionalities of the application we aim to create. These can be seen in trello with the corresponding label on it. In the future I aim to continue with specifying user stories and also work on the "active" ones during the sprints. To make sure I do this I will attend our meetings on mondays and fridays so I am present in the discussions and planning of our work.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?
My contribution for this week's deliveries is that I have made a lot of user stories. I have also helped some of my team members with understanding the template for the user stories and how they should be written. Next work week I will contribute by taking on responsibility for some user stories and I will actively connect with our stakeholder to get feedback. I will also start doing weekly briefings every Thursday with our stakeholder to provide feedback for our sprint reviews on fridays.
