Last week I wrote that I wanted to learn more about connecting GUI-parts with functionality, but I have not delivered on this wish. Going forward I want to learn more about Android Studio to be able to work more independently on GUI-elements and perhaps on functionality next sprint as well. I can achieve this by using digital resources.

This week I could help my team members learn by explaining new concepts to me, thus giving them the opportunity to repeat knowledge. Also trying to explain something to someone demands a higher knowledge than just having it internally.

This week I didn't do anything extra beyond our standard of working with stories, writing tasks, coding and keeping to the deadlines, meetings and reviews. I felt like the team had a better understanding of the SCRUM-practices this week and a better workflow overall. We had a higher success rate on our KPI:s.

My contribution to the team deliveries were constraints at the edit rating fragment, right font on the text labels, movie image view and movie title textbox. This week I could work more independently but I also had a session with Jenny, Ida and Eugene. Going forward I plan on being as active and contributing as I have been the previous weeks.
