Week 3 individual reflection Fabian Flaa

1. What do I want to learn or understand better?
   After 3 weeks, the work has been more clearly laid out ahead of me, so I realize I need and want to develop my knowledge in both scrum and Android studio in order to better contribute to the project.

2. How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?
   I feel like the same methods I mentioned last week are still relevant as we are still kind of in a startup phase. So, I can help my team learn something new by being open about what I know, and willing to share what knowledge might be useful to the group. Nothing specific in mind but just staying active during group meetings and sharing knowledge that is lacking.

3. What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?
   I feel like I have a fairly good understanding of scrum so far, so I try to assist the others when something about the use of scrum is misunderstood. Mostly trying to increase our time efficiency as that has seemed to be a problem right now, although that could be a symptom of us recently starting up. This contribution is the same as last week as I still feel like we have different understandings of what certain scrum terms entails and how the process should work, so I just try to be open about my understanding and interpretation of scrum.

4. What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?
   We haven't delivered too much this week, but what I've done is write user stories about the app in regards to what our product owner has said. Not too much work has been devoted from my end this week as I have an exam the coming Monday.
