... the current situation or "what is" (A), ... what you want the situation to be or "what might or should be" (B), and ... a plan for getting from where you are to where you want to be or "feedback designed to reduce the gap" (A -> B).

What do I want to learn or understand better?

After failing to complete the database user story during the last sprint, in discussion with the team, I decided to give that user story to someone else. Rather than suffering with the database, I switched to the UX instead. Therefore, I want to learn new stuff about the user interface of our app so that I can bring value and eventually complete user stories in time.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

This week I helped my teammates with Android Studio. In addition to that I demonstrated and explained them another Android application and showed how it can be used a template for this project.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

This week, the group had no problems with Scrum, we knew what we needed to work with, and we completed almost all user stories. Other than that, I completed the ASM010: Search bar (rating screen) story, which is an improvement from last week, when I unfortunately could not complete database user story in time.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

During the Monday meeting, I discussed the future of ASM001: Database Tables with Oscar. We decided to transfer him this user story so that he can complete the database in a day or two. As an alternative, this week, I joined the UX team and completed the ASM010: Search bar (rating screen) user story. Together with the UX team, I participated in "ASM012: Rating fields and comment" user story development.
